JAYNE MILLER new director

The Huron-Clinton Metroparks Board of Commissioners named Jayne Miller to be director of the Huron-Clinton Metroparks, effective March 1.

Miller, of Ann Arbor, was the community services area administrator for the City of Ann Arbor which includes Parks and Recreation Services, the Office of Community Development, Planning and Development Services, and the Open Space and Parkland Preservation Program. She brings 22 years experience in various capacities in parks and recreation with Ann Arbor to the Metroparks.

"The field of parks and recreation is my passion," said Miller. "I'm thrilled at this opportunity to work for a high-quality regional park system that enhances quality of life for the people of Southeast Michigan."

Miller holds a master of arts in Recreation Administration from the University of Maryland and a bachelor of arts in Physical Education and Social Science. She is a certified parks and recreation professional and is a member of the National Recreation and Parks Association and the Michigan Recreation and Parks Association.

Miller replaces James J. Bresciam, who retired in August, 2009.

WHAT'S new

Displays at Indian Springs Metropark Environmental Discovery Center: These new displays, pictured on the cover, tell the story of plant and animal life of prairies and wetlands found at the park.

Pool at Willow Metropark: Opening this summer, our new pool with water sprays and a family slide updates the pool complex.

Marina at Metro Beach Metropark: Opening this summer, this $3.4 million marina replaces the original, built in 1959.

Bathhouse at Kensington Metropark: This new bathhouse/food service complex will better serve visitors at Martindale Beach.

SPRING stories

What do you like best about spring at your Metroparks? Here's what some of our fans had to say on Facebook:

"I love returning in the spring and experiencing Kensington Metropark coming back to life, including the many beautiful memories that are held among the trees there. It is and always will be a very special and sacred place for me to return to year after year."

– Julie Anne Lowe

"I ran the 8-mile loop at Kensington so many times one spring that I literally followed a couple of swans by watching them incubate their eggs all the way to birth. One day, there they were with these little (cygnets). I felt like a member of their family!"

– Angela Sohn

I love when the blue herons are nesting at Kensington. They make an incredible amount of noise, lol!"

– Heather Currie Toll

I live to go birding at Kensington, it's a great "birdy" park that I think a lot of people overlook. Plus I'm one of the leaders for the three annual bird counts there including the spring count."

– Pat Baize

The redbuds blooming at Lower Huron have to be at the top of the list! But, I'm just a little biased when it comes to my favorite Metropark!"

– Sandra Burns

Even though most of our Facebook fans mused about Kensington, spring renews the beauty at all 13 Huron-Clinton Metroparks. See how we tap maple trees and collect sap to make maple syrup at Hudson Mills, Kensington, Indian Springs, Oakwoods or Wolcott Mill Metroparks. Bird festivals at Metro Beach, Kensington and Oakwoods offer you the chance to go on a bird walk, meet live birds and more. This year marks the 190th anniversary of the Lewis Cass Expedition of 1820, during which explorers made a lunch stop at what is now Metro Beach Metropark before they continued on their journey to the upper Great Lakes and Mississippi region. A special re-enactment on May 22 commemorates this historical event.

On our golf courses, we've improved our game by initiating a sliding scale of fees, giving golfers opportunities to save and play during our non-peak times.

So, come out for a walk, breathe in the air, and take a fresh look at all there is to offer at 13 Huron-Clinton Metroparks, one of the nation's best regional park systems, that was created to serve Southeast Michigan.

Then, join the conversation by becoming a fan of Huron-Clinton Metroparks on Facebook.

With new signs of life emerging, spring is a great time to get out and enjoy the Metroparks' natural areas. One of the best places to enjoy early signs of spring is a floodplain forest. These unique wetlands are found in low-lying areas adjacent to rivers and streams. Floodplain forests are one of the most biologically productive and diverse ecosystems in our area, thanks to seasonal floods that deposit nutrients and create unique topography.

Plants that live in floodplain forests are specifically adapted to seasonal flooding, and many species actually depend on natural flooding cycles to survive and reproduce. The bladdernut shrub releases its seeds in capsules, which float downriver in the floodwaters. Sycamore and silver maple, two trees found in floodplain forests, have roots that can tolerate complete inundation for much of the year. This unique habitat also supports certain threatened and endangered species, several of which are found at the Metroparks.

In spring, floodplain forests are alive with signs of new life. Skunk cabbage, one of the first plants to emerge in spring, generates its own heat which helps the purple, conical flowers push through snow and frozen ground. Small, shallow wetlands called vernal ponds remain after floodwaters recede, and these ephemeral pools provide critical breeding habitat for many amphibians. Because vernal ponds are temporary, the eggs of frogs and salamanders are able to develop without the risk of being eaten by fish or other aquatic predators. In early spring, you can often hear the calls of chorus frogs, spring peepers and wood frogs as they stage for mating.

Continuous tracts of floodplain forests once ran along the edges of rivers throughout southern Michigan, but today, most of the original floodplain forest habitat in our area has been destroyed or fragmented by agriculture and development. Alterations to the natural flow of rivers have also reduced habitat quality of existing remnants. Exotic invasive species displace native floodplain forest plants and degrade wildlife habitat. However, by preserving natural hydrology, removing invasive species, and working to re-connect forest fragments, we can restore the ecological health of these degraded ecosystems.

We need your help to ensure that floodplain forests and other ecosystems remain healthy for years to come. The Metroparks Natural Resources Department typically holds two volunteer workdays each month. In spring, volunteers primarily work to remove garlic mustard, an invasive woodland wildflower, from our high-quality natural areas. For more information on volunteer workdays or how to get involved with ecological stewardship, contact Justin Heslinga at 810-227-2757 or justin.heslinga@metroparks.com.

Indian Springs Metropark Nature Center
March Weekends (except March 28)
Call for times $

Maple syrup is truly an American-made product, in fact, Michigan ranked fifth in the country for producing about 115,000 gallons of syrup last year.

Maple syrup is made only in North America. This is because the natural range of the sugar maple tree (the preferred maple for sap collection) is the north-east portion of the United States and the southern sections of Ontario and Quebec. It is here, too, where the proper springtime weather exists to create the “sap runs” when we tap trees to collect sap.

As spring approaches, daytime temperatures begin to rise. Still, it is usually cold at night. This see-saw effect of warm days and cold nights causes pressure changes within the trees. During cold nights, a negative pressure exists which causes the maple trees to absorb moisture from the soil. During the day, as the trees warm up, carbon dioxide gases expand, which generates a positive pressure within the tree. If the tree’s internal pressure is greater than the external barometric pressure, sap will be pushed out of a hole drilled into the tree, much like a pressurized garden hose will leak if a nail is punched into it. The best daily temperature range for this process is 20° F to 41° F and these conditions are only found during a few short weeks, typically in March in Michigan.

Maple sap is mainly water with dissolved sugars (about two percent), minerals, and organic and amino acids. To turn the sap into syrup, most of the water must be boiled away. As the water evaporates, the sugars become more concentrated. The heat from the fire is also the magic wand that blends the sugars, acids and minerals into the characteristic “maple” flavor. Without being “flamed boiled” the resulting syrup would be sweet but not maple flavored.

If you’d like to experience maple sugaring firsthand, come to one of the programs offered at Hudson Mills, Indian Springs, Kensington, Oakwoods and Wolcott Mill Metroparks this spring.

REMEMBER, YOU'RE NOT JUST fertilizing your lawn

Fertilize sparingly and carefully. Storm drains found in our streets and yards empty into our lakes and rivers. So, when we fertilize our lawn we could also be fertilizing our lakes and rivers. While fertilizer is good for our lawn, it's bad for our water.

Simple steps to take:

- Sweep fertilizer and grass clippings back onto your lawn
- Select a lawn service that uses organic fertilizers or offers a slow-release nitrogen, low or no phosphorus option
- Choose a fertilizer with low or no phosphorus
- Keep fertilizer applications at least 20 feet away from the edge of lakes, streams or storm drains.
